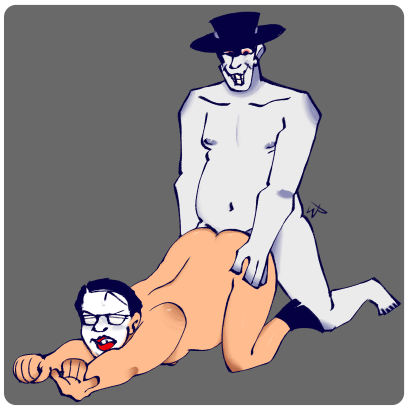
Episode VIII: The Fire Which God Has Put There



Post 6607436: blood_meridian judge_holden Kappi0 smartschool

And they are dancing, the board floor slamming under the jackboots and the fiddlers grinning hideously over their canted pieces. Towering over them all is the judge and he is naked dancing, his small feet lively and quick and now in doubletime and bowing to the ladies, huge and pale and hairless, like an enormous infant. He never sleeps, he says. He says he'll never die. He bows to the fiddlers and sashays backwards and throws back his head and laughs deep in his throat and he is a great favorite, the judge. He wafts his hat and the lunar dome of his skull passes palely under the lamps and he swings about and takes possession of one of the fiddles and he pirouettes and makes a pass, two passes, dancing and fiddling all at once. His feet are light and nimble. He never sleeps. He says that he will never die. He dances in light and in shadow and he is a great favorite. He never sleeps, the judge. He is dancing, dancing. He says that he will never die.

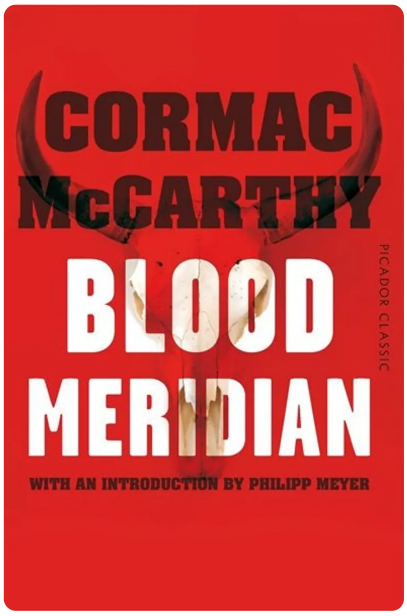
Episode XIII: The Judge Told Them A Story - by Aaron Gwyn



The 30th anniversary of Blood Meridian - Pan Macmillan

About This Collection

The epilogue leans into Blood Meridian and the evening redness in the West. Judge Holden casts a long shadow over the frontier trail while Kappi0 and smartschoolboy9 turn the fire which God has put there into a slow, tense story. Expect spilled blood, nightmares, and a part 2 that pushes the Judge Told Them A Story mood past the page. View the full gallery through the link above.
