Effective Citizenship Analysis

Use your ideas and knowledge to list and answer questions about civic obligations and responsibilities.

List the three civic obligations or responsibilities of U.S. citizens that you think are most important.
1	Obeying the laws
2	Paying taxes
3	Vote in the presidential elections

Answer each of the following questions with at least two complete sentences.
What does it mean to be a good citizen? Good citizens take active roles in their community by writing letters to government officials about problems, and volunteers help with the community's infrastructure. They all so do their civic obligation and responsibility.
What is the difference between a civic obligation and a civic responsibility? Be sure to give an example for each to help explain. Civic obligation is something that has to be done, while responsibility is less pressing. For example, civic responsibility would be like voting; we are not required to vote, but it would be favorable to do it. An obligation is like paying taxes. If you don't pay your taxes, then there will be big consequences (like the IRS).
When have you personally fulfilled a civic obligation or responsibility? I fulfilled a civic obligation or responsibility, by supporting the troops (responsibilities). And the biggest and easiest one to follow, I obey the law. (obligation)
Why is it important to a community for people to demonstrate good citizenship? In a community, you and others need to be good citizens because when you're a good citizen, you help out around this community in schools or other community facilities. You are also paying local taxes, which help pay for roads, local parks, water, recycling, and much more, which helps improve your local community, making it a safer place to live.
What could happen if people do not fulfill a civic obligation or responsibility? Give a specific example. Obligation- Depending on how big, it could be jail time or a fine. For example, if you don't obey the law you will get jail time and or a fine depending on that specific law, that you have
